Info on the company picking up: The Clothing Drive's mission consists of providing a good quality of new or used clothing to developing countries. They process used clothing and export overseas as well as distributing in the United States. They export to various countries in South America, Europe, and Africa as well as Haiti and other countries in the Caribbean and Central America. They collect, sort and grade thousands of pounds of credential clothing daily. In addition, their mission is to become a viable alternative to landfills. The recycling clothes process not only reduces waste and saves our environment but also create new jobs for the U.S. citizens. They cooperate with many charities and organizations that take care about people and environment. They reduce the amount of garbage to minimum by utilizing destroyed cloths as wiping rags or reclaiming fiber. By providing such services to non-profit and profit organizations they create jobs for people in the U.S. and abroad helping local communities and economies in emerging countries as well as helping our country become greener cleaner place.
